

Volunteers Build Playground For Local Children In Need

POSTED: 6:45 pm EDT September 7, 2005

RALEIGH, N.C. -- Local children in need have a new place to play.

LARGER +

These volunteers work to build a playground for children in need.

On Wednesday, about 250 volunteers helped build a new playground for The Healing Place of Wake County, a non-profit organization that helps homeless people with substance abuse problems. The group rolled up its sleeves to build fences, install equipment, and help with the landscaping.

The playground is part of The Healing Place's new women's facility in North Raleigh.

The women's facility helps homeless women and their children.

Copyright 2005 by WRAL.com. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.