

61°

CHARLOTTE > | NOVEMBER 20, 2019

Wake County Approves Million Dollar Grant for Healing Transitions

LOG IN

BY SPECTRUM NEWS STAFF | WAKE COUNTY
PUBLISHED 3:47 PM ET NOV. 19, 2019

WAKE COUNTY, N.C. – Healing Transitions provides shelter and recovery services for men and women who need them.

- Wake County commissioners approved a $1 million grant for a women's recovery center
- The center does not turn anyone away
- Expansion is to begin within six to nine months

Wake County commissioners have approved a $1 million grant for the expansion of a Healing Transitions women's recovery center.

This will allow the women's campus to add 90 extra beds on top of the 120 already there. They will also be able to expand the laundry, bathing, and dining services.

While overcrowding can be an issue, the center does not turn anyone away.

Executive Director Chris Budnick says, "We've got a shelter here that we are in and then we have two separate classrooms where we put down mats to accommodate people and it's just out of this need to serve folks who are really some of the most vulnerable in our community."

Expansion of the center is set to begin within six to nine months.